Sustained remission with adherence to protocol-defined prednisone dose at wk 52
Patients with sustained remission at wk 52 — no. (%)	56 (56)	26 (53)	7 (14)	9 (18)
Primary outcome: unadjusted difference in rate of sustained remission vs. placebo + 26-wk taper (99.5% CI) — percentage points [†]	42 (18 to 66)	39 (12 to 66)	—	—
P value	<0.001	<0.001

P value	0.003	0.03
Cumulative prednisone dose
Expected cumulative dose — mg[‡]

Median	1862	1862	3296	3818
Range	630 to 6602	295 to 9912	932 to 9778	822 to 10,698
P value vs. each placebo group	<0.001	<0.001

[⊛] Values are for the patients who had sustained remission while adhering to the protocol-defined prednisone dose at week 52, except as noted. Patients who had a flare, received escape therapy, withdrew from the trial, did not adhere to the protocol-defined prednisone taper, did not have remission by week 12, or had an elevated concentration of C-reactive protein (CRP) followed by an elevated or missing CRP concentration at the next assessment (except for the sensitivity analyses, from which these patients were excluded) were classified as not having had a response with respect to sustained remission.

[†] P values were calculated by a Cochran–Mantel–Haenszel test for superiority, with adjustment for the baseline prednisone dose (≤ 30 mg per day vs. > 30 mg per day).

[‡] The values for the expected cumulative dose were based on a patient's starting prednisone dose in the taper, assuming that the taper was continued without error.

[§] The values for the actual cumulative dose were based on actual records of prednisone taken and included all escape therapy and use of commercial prednisone as well as the prednisone used in the tapering process. P values were calculated by a van Elteren test that was stratified according to the baseline prednisone dose (≤ 30 mg per day vs. > 30 mg per day). For any records of missed tablets from the protocol-defined taper of prednisone, the missed tablets were assumed to be the minimum-dose tablets available from that pack. Patients who received an increased dose of prednisone because they entered escape therapy were included in their originally assigned treatment group. No imputation of missing data was implemented.
